

THE HIGH HOLY DAYS IN ISRAEL

Chava Burnham

As I prepare to observe the High Holy Days in Israel for the fifth time, it's nice to look back and reflect on my previous Rosh Hashanas and Yom Kippurs, and see how life has evolved for me since I moved to the Holy Land.

It's quite surreal for me to write that I've been living in Israel for nearly five years. Sometimes, it feels like the time has gone by in a wondrous flash. At other times, however, I feel like it's dragging on and on, as the days, weeks and months pass here in the Middle East!

The first time I celebrated the High Holy Days as an olah (an immigrant to Israel) my husband and I were living in Alon Shvut. Alon Shvut is a small religious community in the Judean hills, south of Jerusalem, and Rosh Hashana there was stormy and cold. The rain came pouring down and the wind howled. I remember everything being so new and different--I had never lived in such a small town! It was possible, easy, in fact, to walk across the entire town. Living in Gush Etzion, the area of Judea that includes Alon Shvut, was an adventure. Everything was at once rugged, yet delicately beautiful.

We had made aliyah in mid-summer, so the High Holy Days were our first major holidays in Israel. How exciting! It's really an amazing feeling--asking forgiveness from Hashem in the holy land of Israel. Standing and praying to Hashem, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the place where these great men actually lived and walked, was like living in history!

Our family consisted of just my husband and myself in Alon Shvut. Our son Ariyeh was born soon after we moved to Tsfat, one of the four holy cities of Israel. Tsfat is way up in northern Israel, and the High Holy Days were just incredible there. The Old City of Tsfat is really something else. Just walking around filled me with a feeling of awe, hearing the blast of the shofar emanating from every direction. Ariyeh was just a couple of months old. Here was this little, brand new soul, privileged not only to be born in Israel, but to be surrounded by intense kedusha (holiness) on those amazing days.

For two and a half years, I walked up and down the side of the mountain in Tsfat, where we lived, looking out onto the wilderness. The setting sun on the mountain was spectacular. Each evening in the month of Elul, as the sky slowly grew darker and full of stars, the streets would fill up with people, families and strollers. Everyone around me was preparing for the holiday. Starting at the beginning of the month of Elul, when the process of returning to Hashem begins, the feeling of prayer was thick in the air. It seemed as though there was Torah everywhere in Tsfat, in everyone's mouth, at every turn. I'm so grateful to have lived there for so long.

Modi'in, the beautiful and vibrant city nestled directly between Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, is where we lived for a year and a half after Tsfat. In Modi'in there was a completely different type of feeling around the High Holy Days than in Tsfat, but still one of reverence. On Yom Kippur, it definitely felt like it was the "Shabbat of Shabbats." For a mostly secular city, it truly felt as though the city was completely still and quiet. While living in Modi'in, our son Oren was born. All of these blessings! It was an amazing Yom Kippur. A challenging one as well--my first with more than one child to look after, but I left the holiday with a feeling of being cleansed from the neshama (soul) out.

I remember the incredible feeling of knowing that most of the people in the country, all around me, were experiencing Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur together with me. Round challahs and jars of honey were sold in every store, all over the place. It felt like people were especially kind to one another. It was as though we were really all in this together--because we really are all in this together!

The coming year of 5770 now finds my family in the Shomron (Samaria), on a small yishuv (settlement) called Sha'arie Tikvah. Only Hashem knows how long we'll call this our home, but home it is for now. Thankfully, it's treating us well. Living in Israel is always an adventure. The world seems to have a constant eye on Israel, but Hashem has His protective hand over us.

Whether you are currently chutz la'aretz--outside of the Land--or in Israel, I pray that our ultimate redemption comes soon, so we can all finally come home.

Chava Yocheved Burnham lives in Sha'arie Tikvah with her husband and children. She's been in Israel for four and a half years, and loves it there!
